

BONES FOUND IN STUDENT'S BAG

Last week, a bunch of bones were found in the bag of a student attending St Benedict's College. The bones were found during a raid at school; everyone was horrified at the grotesque image of the bloody bones.

After a few tests were made, the bones were identified as being human; not only human, but they were those of Mr. Stackhouse, the English teacher who had been missing for the last couple of days.

The girl wouldn't give any information or details about what had happened, until Inspector Douglas made her surrender after a few questions were inquired.

She admitted that she had rage issues; it turns out that the previous week, Stackhouse had lost it and had started screaming off his head at her. She couldn't stand being yelled at, so she attacked him and oddly, she felt a sudden urge to feed on his body; "his flesh was so enticing," she claimed, and ended up having Stackhouse for lunch.

The police are still doubtful and they haven't made a decision about what to do with the girl yet, as further investigations need to be carried out.

Caryl Mckay, 4 Paris